The New Mexico Film Office Announces “Monsters of God” to film in New Mexico

SANTA FE, NM - New Mexico Film Office Director Nick Maniatis announced today that the television pilot, "Monsters of God," produced by TNT, starring Garret Dillahunt ("12 Years A Slave"), Lauren Ambrose ("Six Feet Under"), Brian Geraghty ("Chicago P.D."), Caitlin Gerard ("American Crime"), Pat Healy ("Cheap Thrills") and Kwame Patterson ("The Wire") is filming in November through December in Albuquerque and Santa Fe.

"Albuquerque welcomes the new TNT pilot 'Monsters of God' to our city," said Albuquerque Mayor Richard Berry. "The film industry provides high-paying, creative jobs to our citizens and many businesses are affected positively by the filming here in Albuquerque."

"'Monsters of God' continues the great run of productions that have chosen Santa Fe county for its iconic looks and variety. Bienvenidos!" said Katherine Miller, Santa Fe County Manager.

The production will employ over 125 New Mexico crew members and approximately 600 New Mexico background talent. Directed and produced by Rod Lurie ("Straw Dogs," "The Contender," TV's "Hell on Wheels" and "Commander In Chief") along with producers Marc Frydman ("Commander In Chief," "The Contender" and "Stargate") and PLAN B ENTERTAINMENT.

"'Monsters of God' isn't just a series close to my heart, it is my heart, and I am very much looking forward to working with my fantastic team in New Mexico to create a top-notch series," said Rod Lurie.

In "Monsters of God," savagery and violence are the cornerstones of Colonel "Terrible" Bill Lancaster's holy war against the Comanche in post-Civil War Texas. Despite the tenuous peace between the Comanche and local townspeople, Lancaster sets out on a quest to kill off every single member of the tribe, bringing wild chaos to the town of Slater. Meanwhile, his wife, Cynthia Lancaster, will let no one get in the way of her obsessive quest to institute her wildly feminist ideals. Whether by force or free will, change is coming to Texas, and the escalating insanity will reveal humanity at its most monstrous.
